GOV. CUTLER'S CANDIDACY.

Governor John C. Cutler is out with announcement of his candidacy for re-nomination at the hands of the Republicans of Utah, and accompanies his declaration with a program which he would like to see carried out if re-elected. Unless his party intends to repudiate his administration and assume the defensive position which repudiation would entail, it is probable he will be re-nominated in spite of the fact that the federal office holders' combination desires to displace him with one of their machine.

Generally speaking, the governor has been an efficient executive, though no one could accuse him of brilliancy, and his appearance as a representative of the state is something less than impressive. But he has evidently given the state the best that was in him and is entitled to claim indorsement from his party.

Incidentally, admitting that Governor Cutler is about as good a man as the Republicans can muster for the job, the Democrats of Utah can find any one of a dozen prominent men in their party who would be able in office and represent the state better in its relations with outsiders.

CHIEF VAIL'S REMOVAL.

The summary removal of Chief Vail of the fire department, "for the good of the service" would be something of a joke if it did not involve a gross injustice to Vail. He was entitled to a hearing of any charge made against him, or in the absence of a hearing, the public was entitled to some better reason for his removal. "The good of the service" is about the last consideration regarded in appointments by this administration of the city; and Vail's own appointment was so distinctly for the political demoralization of the fire department as to discount any pretense of desire for efficiency in that branch of the public service.

Fortunately for the city, the council balked at the second step in the mayor's program and refused to appoint James Devine as chief. To be sure, the reasons for the refusal were political, but Devine as chief would be the last straw for a long-suffering community's patience. Politically, Devine has been a Hessian, his allegiance depending altogether on the prospect for office. First a Republican, then an "American," then chairman of the Republican city committee, and now an applicant for place under the "Americans," he holds the Utah record for lightning-change shifts in political conviction. But, waiving his readiness to exchange convictions for office, he is not fitted for the office he desires and which was promised him by the mayor. An excellent judge of horses, he has neither the cool judgment nor the faculty of maintaining discipline which go to make a good fire chief. When he held the place before he lacked the confidence of business men whose property interests are at stake in any management of the fire department. He took too much interest in politics to be a good fireman; and he took just enough interest in the fire department to be a poor politician.

SCORE ONE FOR PUBLISHERS.

Although Speaker Cannon's special committee on the paper trust was unable to discover any evidence that a trust existed among paper manufacturers, it took a New York grand jury only a few days to return an indictment against one branch of the trust; and it took only a few days more to compel a plea of guilty from the indicted ones. Because they pleaded guilty and saved the government the expense of prosecution, the offenders were permitted to escape with a fine of $2,000 each—a punishment about equivalent to a day's profits.

The evidence in the case was secured and prepared for presentation by John D. Norris, representing the American Newspaper Publishers' association, the same men who gave the Mann congressional committee proof of the existence of a criminal trust among the news paper manufacturers, and the verdict is at once a vindication of Mr. Norris and an arraignment of the Mann committee's findings. Likewise, the penalty agreed to by the government as prosecutor indicates the futility of expecting any real restraint or punishment of the trusts under a Republican administration. What constituted an enormous crime in trusts hostile to the administration is regarded by the government as a minor offense to be palliated when the paper trust is the offender, because the paper trust has been on almost as good terms with the powers that be as the steel trust itself.

Moreover, the outcome of the case is encouraging to the newspaper publishers, because it shows that although they cannot hope for any real help from congress so long as the Republicans are in control, they can prove their facts in the public view and ultimately compel congress to take cognizance of conditions that have become intolerable to the consumers of paper in this country.

SPEAKS WELL FOR UTAH.

A few days ago Immigration Inspector Longley, stationed in Salt Lake, completed a tour of inspection of every penal and public eleemosynary institution in the state. He visited every county jail and the charitable establishments in pursuance of a custom followed by the government every four years to ascertain if there are any alien public charges who come within the three-year limit, and thus are subject to deportation.

None such was found, save in the state prison; but the remarkable thing about Mr. Longley's investigation is that in very few of the county jails were there found any prisoners at all. Inspector Longley visited twenty-seven county seats, some of them near and some remote. He expresses his surprise at the fact that the county prisons nearly everywhere are empty. Only in a few of the larger cities are there offenders incarcerated. Mr. Longley's testimony is that his information is that the conditions which he found are not an exception, but are the rule. Certainly this speaks well for Utah. It is evidence of two things. Outside the larger cities there is a marked absence of crime; outside the larger cities, too, the officers are eternally vigilant and the courts work with expedition. It is a matter for congratulation that Utah can point to its empty jails—there is no fame so pfitable as that of holding the record for out-lawry.

UTAH IS FORTUNATE.

To the north of us, to the east of us and to the south of us there have been floods entailing loss of property amounting into the millions of dollars; in cases the floods have assumed the proportions of a cataclysm. In Montana the damage is not yet to be measured in dollars; the loss is tremendous. There has been loss of life, people have been compelled to flee their homes, and there is ruin and desolation from one end of the state to the other.

The dispatches last week told of the "June rise" in the Missouri, the Kaw and the Mississippi rivers. The "June rise" is synonymous with hundreds of thousands of acres of crops ruined, immense areas of densely populated country devastated, thriving towns laid waste, and pitiful wreck everywhere. The people who inhabit the fertile regions of the Missouri and Mississippi valleys are a sturdy, honest, industrious people. Each year they witness the dispiriting spectacle that is the wake of the "June rise," but they are not easily daunted, and they set their faces bravely and hopefully toward the future and their hands to restoring order out of chaos. They have a courage which equals, if not, indeed, surpasses, the bravery of the most courageous soldier. It is a courage born of necessity; it is the courage of patience and perseverance.

Each year the Kaw at length voids its overwhelming volumes into the Missouri. In turn that gigantic trail of mud and liquid mire adds its overburden to the already bankfull Mississippi. Men with anxious faces, haggard and worn with sleepless nights on the levees and the embankments, watch for the crest to pass; women pray that the banks will hold and that, for another year at least their property, their all, may be spared.

Of a surety, these be trying times for the people who live in the lowlands along the waterways of the great basin.

Reflecting upon these things, one is moved to say that Utah is indeed blessed. In this state there have been rainstorms and slight damage, it is true, but when these are taken in comparison with the terrible visitations in other sections, they sink into insignificance.

The lid on the winter racing game at New Orleans. Gambling in this country will soon be reduced to expectorating at a knothole, but with prohibition in the south even that ancient and honorable form of amusement will be somewhat dry work for the participants.

The troubles of Romeo and Juliet, Heloise and Abelard and Jonas and Eurycle were really not worth mentioning when we consider the dickens of a time Heloise's having in getting hitched to Anna.

Dr. Bryan is endeavoring to remove some of the gall stones from the Republican platform, and he doesn't appear to care whether the patient survives the operation or not.

If Wade Ellis thinks the so-called anti-injunction plank in the Republican platform is just the thing, why in thunder didn't he write it that way in the first place?

No man ever gets so rich that he gives the glad hand to the assessor.

SOCIETY

The McMillan home was the scene yesterday afternoon of a most delightful tea, when Mrs. H. G. McMillan and her daughters, the Misses Eoss and Mildred McMillan, received nearly 200 of their friends. Receiving with them was Mrs. W. W. Chisholm, and a number of other friends assisted. Mrs. Thomas Weir, Mr. John E. Dooly, Mrs. J. B. Cosgriff and Mrs. James Finlen took turns pouring in the dining room, and assisting them were the Misses Lorene Leary, Eleanor Stewart, Louise Sullivan and Aline McMillan. Miss Eudora Dalrymple, Miss Genevieve McCormick and Mrs. Leslie L. Savage presided over the punch bowl. The large rooms were transformed into perfect bowers of roses, all the varieties being shown in the different rooms. The hall and living room were in deep red, while pink decorated the parlors, where the receiving party stood, and white the library. In the dining room a most artistic arrangement of pink and white roses was used, a great basket filling the central part of the table, while roses were banded all around on sideboards and mantels.

Mrs. Morris Foster entertained about fifty of her friends yesterday afternoon at a tea to meet Mrs. C. S. Morrison of Colorado Springs. The rooms were bright with red roses, great sprays of them filling vases and a most artistic arrangement decorating the table. The hostess was assisted in receiving by her mother, Mrs. Partridge, Mrs. G. M. Forbes and Mrs. C. E. McCulloch. Mrs. William D. Foster, Miss Annie Adams and Miss Bessie Hume served in the dining room.

The New York papers have most flattering notices about the "Three Twins," a musical play, the lyrics of which were contributed by O. A. Hauerbach of this city. The play is not a new one, having had a good run in Chicago last winter, but it is its first appearance in New York, and the critics seem to have taken kindly to it.

The Third battalion at Fort Douglas, now out on a five days' practice, will return tomorrow morning. The usual informal hop will be given Friday evening, and following the dance Lieutenant and Mrs. Butler will entertain at a hop supper.

The usual Wednesday rush will be in order today and a great many weddings will take place. Among the weddings of well-known young people are that of Miss Della Hines to Frank M. Burrell, that of Miss Rosalita Nye and William M. Woolley, that of Miss Crislie Lawson to Harry Chapman.

William Morris, the art collector and connoisseur, is here on his annual visit and will open up his exhibit of oil paintings within a few days at Walker's store. Mr. Morris includes in his collection this year a number of paintings by J. T. Harwood, the Utah artist, and he says the work of this artist is meeting with warm appreciation on the coast. He has fully as fine an exhibit as he had on hand some years ago when he visited here, before the great San Francisco fire. Mr. Morris will be at the University club, as usual.

The Regimental Bridge club met yesterday with a few guests. The usual Port Douglas, and prizes were won by Mrs. J. M. Aramith and Mrs. Snow. Miss Gertrude Hanson was a guest from town.

Mrs. Nat Brigham and her two younger daughters reached here last evening from Chicago, and will spend the summer with Mrs. L. A. Clayton. Mrs. Brigham's eldest daughter, Miss Grace Young, was already here and will remain for the summer months.

Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Hyde, jr., are in New York at the Plaza enjoying the early summer season in the metropolis.

Mr. and Mrs. A. B. Greeson and their daughter, Miss Hilda Greeson, took a party of friends to Provo yesterday to spend the day at the strawberry festival.

Miss Althea Wheeler and her department at the university will entertain tomorrow at a luncheon for Professor Henry Suzzallo.

Mrs. John Reed has returned from a six weeks' stay in the northwest, having visited her mother and spent some time during the stay of the fleet in Seattle.

The Misses Iola Steers and Wynne Coman left yesterday for their home in Portland, after a stay of a few days with friends here.

Mr. and Mrs. Mark M. Murtaugh have gone to Twin Falls, Ida., to spend the summer.

Mrs. W. H. Bramel will entertain today at a luncheon for Miss Robertson of Colorado Springs, who is visiting her.

Mrs. Charles H. Griffin gives a children's party today for her little granddaughter, Floradora Thomas.

Mrs. John Delano will be the hostess today at a card luncheon at the Bransford.

Mrs. C. S. Vadner entertains at a luncheon today at her country home.

Mrs. A. S. Bowden of Fort Douglas entertains the ladies of the Third battalion tonight at a dinner.

The Wednesday luncheon will be on today at the Country club, and a number of small parties are planned for the day.

Mr. and Mrs. William H. Hunt entertained three tables at bridge last evening for Miss Luvera Snow.

Mrs. Murray Godbe and her children have gone to Long Beach to spend the summer, where they have taken a cottage.

Miss Marjorie Jacobs will entertain a number of her girl friends this afternoon at a tea.

Mrs. Ida Smoot Dusenberry is back from a short trip to Idaho.

Everett Grant, son of Robert D. Grant of Los Angeles, is here visiting the C. A. Dole family at 47 Eighth East street.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph J. Campbell returned last evening from a short business trip to Great Falls, Mont., and are now at home at the Keith apartments.

Mrs. Alexander C. Ewing entertains at a bridge affair this afternoon at her home.

Miss Rae Barch gives a luncheon tomorrow for her guests, Mrs. Evans and Miss McCrory.

Mrs. J. C. Struer and her little daughter have gone to Long Beach, where they will spend the summer.

Francis Critchlow returned yesterday from Princeton, where he has completed his sophomore year.

Miss Vera Edwards is home from Los Angeles, where she has spent the past year in school.

Hugh Williams is home from Exeter and will spend the summer with his father, P. L. Williams.

Mrs. William H. Child has issued invitations for a bridge tea to be given a week from Friday.

The meeting this morning of the Hospital Aid society will be the last one of the summer season.

The Daughters of Pioneers will meet at the Lion House at 3 o'clock this afternoon. As this is the last meeting before adjourning for the summer, after the program refreshments will be served. All interested are cordially invited.

GOOD AND BAD BY TURNS.

(Louisville Courier-Journal.)

At a banquet recently given by the business men of this city, the Rev. Dr. C. R. Hudson told the following story, which made a great hit: He said two men, who had not met for many years, but who had been warm friends, were talking about how things had been with them. Each said he had had the usual ups and downs, some good and some bad.

"Well, I was married," said one.

"Well, it wasn't so good. The woman was awfully mean."

"That's bad," commented his friend.

"Well, it wasn't so bad, either. She had a lot of money."

"That was good," again remarked his friend.

"Well, it wasn't so good, either. I invested the money in sheep and they all lay down and died."

"That was bad."

"Well, it wasn't so bad, either. I pulled off the wool and sold it for more than the sheep were worth."

"That was good."

"Well, it wasn't so good, either. I put the money in a house and one night the house burned down."

"That's bad."

"Well, it wasn't so bad, either. The woman burned to death in it."
